Up to last year, the U.S. deficit had been financed by foreign investors purchasing dollar securities --stocks and bonds - and other assets. But starting late last year, the deficit has been financed by foreign central banks intervening to support the dollar and subsequently placing that money in U.S. govern-

"The news is disquieting because the preconditions for a better performance were in place," he said, pointing to relatively low levels of inflation in the major countries, the strong recovery in corporate profit margins and the drop in oil prices at the beginning of last year.

There are already increasing signs that uncertainty about currency values is undermining confidence of businesses and causing them to slow or cancel spending on new plant and equipment.

TV's Latest Recipe: Corn Flakes and Conversation

By Craig Thompson Special to the Herold Tribune

LONDON - The invitation said cocktails at 7 P.M., but a nightcap might have been more appropriate for the broad-casters gathered in London. Seven o'clock sounds like a sociable bour for most people, but for those who produce early morning television, it is rapidly approaching bedtime. For this week anyway, those irregular sleeping patterns have been abandoned as 186 delegates from 31 countries get down to some serious discussion about breakfast television. It's clear from all the talk at the "Good Morning World" conference, meeting at a London hotel, that a lot has been going on while most of the world has been asleep.

From Tokyo to Madrid, people are wiping the sleep from their eyes to find the normally blank TV screen alive with bright and cheery presenters welcoming the viewer to a brand new day.

"The hours of 6 to 9 in the morning make np a unique part of the day and a time slot that requires a special approac or the day and a time stot that requires a special approach, said Bruce Gyngell, the managing director of Britain's highly successful morning television group TV-AM, which is the host of the conference. "At that time of day people want to be informed, but they don't want to be clobbered with information."

Breakfast television is not a new idea. In the United States it goes back 25 years. But in Europe and the Far East, it has caught on only recently, and it is now spreading so rapidly that program producers are rushing to consult each other to find the winning formula. There's "Good Morning Hong Kong," "Good Morning

Austria tried breakfast television, said Horst Jancik, an executive with the country's state-run ORF television service, but it was not a success.

"Austrians have a rather short breaklast, and they're always in a hurry and they're usually quite late." Mr. Janeik They just manage in make their bus or train." It's another story in Mexico, bowever, where breakfast television is immensely popular, "In Mexico you're glad to get up and face the new day," he said, "and the breakfast time slot is an indispensable part said Maria McBride, the London correspondent for Mexican television. "And we're so talkative that we need to know the latest information, otherwise we'd feel left behind."

In contrast, she said, morning television in colder northern European countries such as Britain "needs in be much more smooth, like a glove that caresses those who don't want to get out of bed and face the British winter."

Finding the right balance of entertainment and information has turned the business of morning TV into a science, And the ranks of market researchers have swollen as executives demand to know just how long it takes people in their "audience profile" to eat breakfast.

Moscow Lets Latvians March to Honor Victims Of 'Stalinist Repression'

By Robert Gillette

Los Angeles Times Service WASHINGTON - Io a remarkable public display of nationalist sentiment, more than 1,000 Latvians marched quietly and without Soviet police interference through the heart of Riga to commemorate victims of Stalinist repression, according to Soviet and emigre sources.

The sources, including a 21-yearold organizer reached by telephone Wednesday in Riga, said the march lasted more than three hours Sunday and gathered as many as 5,000 participants and onlookers that evening when the throng reached the central square.

Latvian and Estonian emigre groups in the United States who received similar telephone reports said this was the first time in memory that a dissident group in the Soviet Union had announced plans two weeks in advance for a large demonstration and had been allowed to proceed.

Much more than a public remembrance of Stalin's victims something in itself long forbidden in the Soviet Union --- the demonstration was an implicit but clear appeal for freedom and indepen-dence for the Baltic states, emigre spokesmen in the United States said.

Annexed by the Soviet Union during the Soviet alliance with Germany in 1940, the once-indepenrepublics of Latvia, Estonia dent and Lithuania oo the Baltic coast have remained hotheds of nationalist sentiment, made more intense in recent years by Moscow's efforts at "Russification."

The three republics, whose an-nexation the United States has cev-er formally recognized, have a combioed population of about 7 million.

Customary Soviet practice has been to arrest nationalist and hu-man rights activists long before they can carry out any such demonstration.

The several Latvians and Estonians who telephoned reports to the West of Sunday's demonstration attributed police restraint in this case to the policy of the Soviet leader, Mikbail S. Gorhacbev, granting limited relaxation of cootrols on information and expressions of public opinion.

Spootaneous demoostratioos have broken out occasionally in the past in the Baltic republics, usually after official folk festivals or sports events, but these have been swiftly suppressed by police.

In a telephone conversation from Riga ou Wednesday, Rolands Silaraups, who identified himself as one of the leaders, said he believed the authorities permitted the march as part of Mr. Gorbachev's policy, but he said it also appeared that police forces were inadequate to disperse the crowd at its peak. Speaking in Russian, Mr. Silar-aups said the demonstratioo began at 4 P.M. Sunday with several hundred people who turned out io response to appeals circulated by a small buman rights group calling itself Helsinki '86. The organizers, scribed as a ostionalist or anti-Soviet demonstration, Mr. Silaraups said: "This would not be correct. It was to commemorate the 38,000 victims of June 14, 1941." A spokesman for Latvian-American groups, Ojars Kalnins, said there have been several nationalist demonstrations at Riga's Freedom Monument in the past six months, but this was the first time a gathering had been announced in advance and allowed to proceed.

"It is also the largest crowd to gather at the monument since the Soviets occupied Latvia io 1940," Mr. Kalnins said. He added that little was known about the organizers except that "they are a very gutsy group."

According to the state-run Moscow News, an "unofficial" hardline group of about 400 marched in Moscow on May 6 protesting what it called Zionists, Masons and imperialists io the Communist Party and the "Americanization" of Sovi et society.

Some Western analysts said this march appeared to have the support of influential bard-line ele ments in the Communist Party.

Senate Panel Calls for Ban On Imports From Toshiba

By David E. Sanger New York Times Server WASHINGTON - Members of a Senate oversight committee have called for a long-term ban on imports of products made by the To-shiba Corp. because a subsidiary of the Japanese conglomerate played the leading role in diverting critical submarine technology to the Soviet Union.

The sharp demands for retaliation, against both Toshiba and Japan, took Resean administration officials by surprise.

The call for action came at a Wednesday hearing, held by the Senate Subcommittee on International Finance and Monetary Policy, with Democrats and Republicans expressing strong support for retaliation against the Toshiba Corp., owner of the Toshiba Machine Co., which sold the machines.

The Senote panel's demands came only a day after the House of Representatives, in a 415-1 vote late Tuesday, passed an amend-ment requiring the State Depart-ment to "enter into discussions. with Japan and Norway regarding compensation for damage to Unit-ed States national security" arising from the incident.

The United States has never before demanded damage payments for such a loss, and the Norwegian ambassador to the United States called the House vote "misguided."

Administration officials have characterized the incident as one of the worst losses of high-technology equipment to the Soviet Union in a decade. EC Talks on Farm Subsidies Collapse

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — The money problems of the European Community worsened Thursday with the collapse of talks by community agriculture ministers on the 1987-88 farm price accord that was to take effect April 1.

Frans Andriessen, the European agriculture commissioner, said he would unilaterally impose cost-saving measures. He did not say what these would be. But sources said they could include reduced or delayed avments to farmers.

Officials said a key part of the farm price arrangement Mr. Andriessen has proposed -a tax on oils and fots to tap new income that four EC nations oppose - would have to be settled by the 12 leaders of the community governments at a meeting June 29-30. The community will have a deficit this year of nearly $6 billion, about $1 billion more than last year due to higher farm spending and lower revenues.

Anglicans Disparage Freemasonry

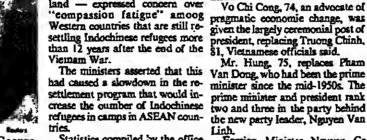

LONDON (Reuters) --- The Church of England concluded in a report Thursday that there are fundamental reasons why Christians should not become Freemasons.

The 56-page report, drawn up for submission to the church's governing Synod, said that some Christians found Masonic rituals disturbing and even evil. Its conclusions were broadly in line with the teaching of other Christian churches and will likely be seen as a further blow to the secret. "craft" of Freemasonry, which has been accused of selfishly fostering the interests of its members.

The all-male Masonic movement, founded as a secret society in Britain in the 17th century, has an estimated worldwide membership of six million. Democrats Agree on * Compromise '88 Budget

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - After six weeks of frustrating negotiations, a House-Senate committee approved on Thursday a $1 trillion comproon Thursday a $1 trillion compro-mise budget for next year that sets up a collision course with the White House over taxes and Pentagon Spending House over taxes and Pentagon

The compromise, which was reached Wednesday by House and Senate Democratic leaders, would gates $19.3 billion in new taxes in widen the circum fiscal year 1988, which begins on Oct. 1. The types of tax increases are not specified in the plan, but Democratic leaders are considering increases in liquor, cigarette and other excise taxes and increases in estate taxes.

The military part of the budget, in a direct challenge to President Ronald Reagan, would require him to accept all the tax increases in order to get a higher budget for the military. If he accepts the tax increases, the Pentagon budget would be $296 billion, $16 billion below the president's request and just $6.4 billion more than the current military budget. The increase would not be enough to cover rises in costs due to inflation.

If the president does not accept the tax increases, the Pentagon budget would be held to $289 billion, just below this year's level. Mr. Reagan denounced the budget proposal Thursday, The Associated Press reported. In 2 statement released by the White House, he said, "The American people don't want more spending. They want, better results."

[Mr. Reagan said that if Con-gress has its way, national security will decline in real terms for the third year. He added, "Their price for meeting our national security needs is this: For every $1 of defense it will cost $10 in new taxes. That's an offer I can refuse."]

The Democratic leaders, the House speaker, Jim Wright of Texas, and the Senate majority leader, Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, pushed for the compromise this week, partly in response to this criticism. They also were smarting from a growing perception that the Democrats, who now control the House and the Senate for the first time in Mr. Reagan's presidency, could not govern because they could not agree on a budget.

A Worthy Plan for Peace

If President Reagan wanted an honorable and sensible resolution of conflicts in Central America, he would grab for the peace plan put forward by Costa Rica's president, Oscar Arias Sanchez, Mr. Reagan's policy of backing the Nicaraguan rebels and driving the Sandinists out of Nicaragua is at a dead end. The Arias plan, whatever its flaws, has promise and wide support.

Mr. Reagan even felt compelled to issue a statement after his meeting with President Arias stressing their agreement on "objectives." But that is not enough. If the Arias plan is to get off the ground, the postponed Central American leaders' meeting to discuss it must be rescheduled. That means Washington must put its full weight behind the initiative. Otherwise, after Mr. Reagan's years of lip service to negotiations. suspicions will rightly linger about his sincerity.

Mr. Arias proposes cease-fires and regional elections, the restoration of civil liberties and the beginning of talks between governments and their "unarmed internal opposition." Nicaragua would "democratize" and the United States would stop aid to the contra rebels. Outwardly, the differences boil down to timing. Mr. Arias wants Washington to stop aid to the contras at the same time the Sandinists commit themselves to democratization. President Reagan insists on continuing to arm the rebels until Nicaraguan freedoms have been established. To Mr. Reagan, beloing the contras is the best way to insure democratization. To Mr. Arias, the rebels are no solution: they are the problem. giving the Sandinists cause for foreign sympathy and a pretext for repression.

Behind the jockeying lies Mr. Reagan's deeper reluctance for any kind of compromise that leaves the Sandinists in power. That reluciance bas doomed past peace initiatives from even being explored. There is no evidence even now that he has changed his mind. Yet there are stirrings that encourage the plan's supporters. The administration has been rocked by the Irancontra affair; future aid for the contras is chancy. Pragmatists bave gained in a White House staff led by Howard Baker. Additionally, the Soviet Union bas sharply cut oil shipments to Nicaragua. The difference will probably be made up by Mexico and Venezuela, giving them leverage. Since Nicaragua is nearly broke, it has an incentive for compromise, providing -and this is the catch - that Mr. Reagan is willing to end aid to the contras.

The Sandinists bave long said they are ready to ban foreign bases and accept policing of frontiers. But they adamantly rule out direct dealings with the contras and have long refused to accept an election process that jeopardized their power.

Much as Nicaragua's neighbors fear the Sandinists, they are at least equally repelled by the contras. Mr. Reagan has so far refused to acknowledge this unpalatable truth, putting all his chips on the contras, an increasingly bad bet. If he wants to rescue his barren Central American policy, he had better, begin soon, by breathing life into the only plausible peace plan around. Otherwise, Americans will conclude that his real aim is not to explore peace but to pass an undeclared war on to his successor. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There has been quite a flap over Representative William Alexander's enterprise in causing the hefty legislative history of the Boland amendment to be exhumed by the cord and be available for purchase in Library of Congress and printed in full in the Congressional Record of this past Monday. The resulting volume, although it is quite portable and bandy, contains more than 400 pages of Bolandiana, It was estimated the other day to have cost the government $197.000 to produce - an assertion that generated much talk of wantonness and profligacy on the part of the Arkansas Democrat, Mr. Alexander. who set the project in motion. The $197,000 estimate is said by some to be high and likely to be recalculated downward. But even if the original figure holds, we think it is as wise an expenditure of funds on the Congressional Record as we have beard of in some time. The volume will be an invaluable source book in the angry debate over the genesis and development of U.S. Nicaragua policy, a debate that could surely profit from the introduction of more

Once More, Leaping Blindly Into the Breach Put an End

N EW YORK — President Rea-gan's pledge to "protect the free world's oil flow" by expanding the U.S. naval presence in the Gulf sug-gests a powerful itcb to plunge the nation into military action. It is also the latest manifestation of fallacious thinking to which all superpowers succumb - the notion that we know the interests of other countries better than they know their own interests.

So far as anyone can tell, none of America's major friends and allies favors the policy the Reagan administration is straining to pursue. West-ern Europe and Japan depend far more than the United States does on the oil passing through the Strait of Hormuz. But they have steadfastiy refused to back Mr. Reagan's macho adventurism — even though he al-leges it to be for their special benefit.

It is not even clear that the Arab governments want to raise the military stakes in the area. Yet on the administration goes, sublimely confident that it understands the issues better than the nations most directly involved, most directly threatened and most familiar with the territory. This has happened before and it always leads to disaster. The most tragic example was Vietnam, where U.S. intervention was intended to rescue East Asia from a Communist takeover. Given this selfless mission. President Lyndon Johnson enuld never understand why the other members of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization would not send more fighting men to Vietnam in order to help the Americans save their countries. In 1967, he sent Clark Clifford on a mission to persuade the SEATO governments to increase their military enntributions. As Mr. Clifford traveled from one capital to another, he soon recognized that the SEATO governments did not see the war as Washington did. They did not agree with the U.S. assessment of the threat or of the domino consequences of a North Vietnam victory, and they were damned if they were going to send more of their boys to Vietnam to be killed.

If the nations that knew the territory best did not see transcendent stakes in the outcome of a civil war in Viet-nam, Mr. Clifford concluded, why in the world was America so heavily involved? Did Americans really know what they were doing? He decided they did not, and the next year, when he became defense secretary, he did his best to end American involvement. Central America is another example of the superpower fallacy. The U.S. policy of military intervention is designed to save the other countries from the wicked Sandinists. But most Latin American governments think that the U.S. policy of militarizing the problem increases desperation and chaos and is far more likely to promote than to check the spread of Marxist revolution

If a Marxist Nicaragua is such a threat, it is a considerably more dire threat to Latin America than to the United States. Latin American countries are far more vulnerable politically and militarily than is the United States, they are closer to the scene and vastly more knowledgeable about it and their leaders are just as deter-mined as the United States is on their behalf in resist their own overthrow. Yet they do not see the threat as apocalyptically as the Reagan administration does, and once again it plunges on, confident of its infallibility. Lebanon was another example. The

Emigrating Soviet Jews Must Have a Right to Choose

N EW YORK - Several American Jewisb organizations bave endorsed an Israeli plan that would require all Jews leaving the Soviet Union to go to Israel via Romania, thereby automatically conferring Israeli citizenship on them and making it harder for them to come to the United States. The plan denies the emigrants the right to determine their own destination and should be opposed until their choice of final destination and citizenship is guaranteed. Jews now leaving the Soviet Union fly first to Vienna. Those who want to go to Israel from there can do so. Or they can fly from Vienna to the United States, which is what most do.

Israel wants to close the option of flying first to Vienna, because it desperately needs the skills and manpower that emigrants can offer. What is more, Israelis feel it is the duty of Jewish emigrants to return to Israel, their homeland. That is understandable, but the proposed policy is coercive and would delay, sometimes for years, the reunion of many emigrants with family members who live in the United States. The emphasis should he on freedom of choice. Under Israeli law, a Soviet refugee acquires Israeli citizenship automatically upon landing in Israel. But once emigres gain Israeli citizenship, they lose refugee status under U.S. law. To enter the United States from Israel, emigres must apply within the normal immigration quotas. Israel needs and wants to attract Soviet Jews. But the right of people to emigrate freely to any country willing to accept them is guaranteed by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Helsinki Final Act. Emigrants hardly deserve further governmental coercion as they step across

W ASHINGTON - Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, absolute ruler of Kuwait, must be quite a fellow. In the last year, the emir closed the National Assembly and shut down the free press, arrested Kuwarti Shrites suspected of supporting Iran; sent $3 billion to Iraq; and showed the Arab world how to manipulate the United States.

This week Pressoent reason he agreed clear the overriding reason he agreed """" 11 Kuwaiti ships: "We This week President Reagan made would open opportunities for the Soviets to move into this chokepoint of the free world's oil flow. In a word: If we don't do the job, the Soviets will, and that will jeopardize our own

That, put simply, is submission to Arab diplomatic blackmail, Sheikh Jaber knew America could not tolerate the presence of the other superpower at the jugnlar of Western oil; by dickering with Moscow, he was able to jerk the United States around. Mr. Reagan is surely aware of that, and has chosen what be regards to be the lesser of two evils.

But here is something we did not know back in January, when the emir was host to the 44 nations of the fifth Islamic Conference: Acting on behalf of the Soviet Union, the emir lobbied the other Moslem heads of state to lean on Pakistan to stop pressing the Russians to leave Afghanistan.

Pakistan resisted; but for the first time, it felt the heat from its Arah neighbors and Islamic brothers to double-cross the Afghan freedom fighters. That was a coup for the Soviet Union and a serious slap at the United States, engineered by a despot determined to show America how necessary it was to appease him. Now the cunning emir has eached

America into protecting his tankers as they support Iraq against Iran. For its own strategic reasons, the United States may have to swallow this mastates may have to reache the marks nipulation of its forces, though hawks from Henry Kissinger to Jeane Kirk-patrick have registered misgivings at its example. Americans do not have to pretend to like it, however, and do not have to let the oil sheikhdoms jerk them around forever. First, Americans should stop flagellating themselves as if the benighted arms-for-hostages dealings with Iran were the cause of the emir's blackmail. Long before, the Saudis and Kuwaitis caved in to the threats of the Iranian oil minister, and stopped full production of oil; the price since has doubled, enabling fran to pursue its war. U.S. duplicity in paying arms for hostages was as nothing compared with the Saudi-Kuwaiti oil sellout of their ally fraq. Next, the United States should inform Saudis, Iraqis and other of sheikhs that American policy cannot rest on vacuumism alone; Arab lead-ers who threaten to choose Soviet protection may one day get it and find themselves turned into Communist South Yearens. The Western superpower will not save them. Third, America should make it clear to Saudis and Omanis that the ultimatum from Kuwait will cost inem dea y on the provision of

The essence of Keynesian theory is its ability to lift an economy's growth rate and push it toward full employment. After three recessions in eight years under the Eisenbower administration, there was plenty of slack in the economy and it took off, in the early 1960s, in a surge of growth unprece-dented in peacetime. Mr. Heller was a man of great warmth and great sympathy for liberal Democrats' overriding concern with employment and the condition of working people. That earned him an unusual degree of trust among his party's politicians and even among labor leaders, who resisted and denounced his wage guidelines. Through his long subsequent career at the University of Minnesota he retained a sharp interest in policy and politics, returning to Washington frequently to advise and to testify, until his death, at the age of 71, on Monday. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

Moving Deeper Into the Gulf No Point in Impeachment

In a move that would steeply escalate the U.S. presence [in the Gulf] and commensurately boost its risks, President Reagan proposes launching an open-ended military commitment that could effectively make the United States a co-belligerent in a long and brutal war. The arguments Mr. Reagan makes for intervening in the Gulf are specious and unconvincing, while the commit-ment be proposes is shrouded with potentially perilous consequences. The fundamental U.S. interest is to be seen not in intervening in the Gulf war but in helping to bring it to an end in a way that would leave no victor free to lord it over its neighbors. That is a task for multinational diplomacy and pressure, not for battleships and bluster.

This experience started me thinking. The traditional theory of education to classical Athens recognized that certain technical skills were essential for leadership. Without training in logic and rheto-ric, for example, one could never climb the ladder of achievement in the citystate. But those were not enough. A commitment to pursue truth, a sense of public service, sound judgment about ends and means, and moral qualities were essential. This tradition was challenged by think-ers whom we know as the Sophists. They maintained that technical skills were an end to and of themselves, that one's talent for arguing a point was more important than the judgment used in deciding which position to defend. They were clever rather than wise. They pursued success instead of excellence and honored intelligence above character.

Much of what passes for political education to U.S. schools of government today appears to be disturbingly analo-gous to the approach of Sophists. Ob-sessed with the mechanics of campaigns and elections, focused on attaining more efficient government without adequate consideration of moral and social values. Americans overlook the most critical requirements of governance. The schools are training technicians, when they should be preparing leaders and stressing the priority of values.

The duty of the elected representative is not only to represent and reflect popular opinion but to lead and educate in the public interest. Such an approach represents far greater respect for the electorate, as well as faith in democracy, than to think it one's responsibility merely to mirror the popular will of the moment. This does not mean that self-righteousness constitutes a useful contribution to the body politic. Abraham Lincoln reminded Americans that "there are few things wholly evil or wholly good. Almost everything, especially goverament policy, is a compound of the Post, is adapted from a speech he delivtwo. Almost everything, especially of ered last month at Harvard University's government policy, is an inseparable Kennedy School of Government.

My moment of truth occurred early in my congressional career when a bill was proposed to make it a crime, with heavy penalries — including a prison term — to burn an American flag.

to burn an American IIag. This was in response to the demon-strainons against the Vietnam War. I was deeply offended by the flag-burning, which I watched on the evening televi-sion news. I had just returned from the funeral in Iowa of a farm boy who had been killed in Vietnam. He was buried with a flag on his casket. As a marine officer, I had served with men who were in combat at the time of this debate. The mood against such protests in my con-gressional district was intensely hostile. But I was convinced that the burning of the flag was protected expression under the Constitution. I voted "no" with only 12 other representatives out of 435. That decision made the other, so-called tough votes during my 16 years in Con-gress relatively easy. It taught me a valu-able lesson: Such a practice is not only good for the soul, but most likely will ultimately be accepted and respected by the electorate as well as one's colleagues Compromise is essential to the political process. But it should take place regarding issues, not ideals, and should be among competing interests, not with one's integrity. Idealists who hold to a principled stance can often help to ensure that the ultimate accommodation of values and interests has been better resolved. Moreover, compromises themselves may involve corrageous acts by office holders when their own constitu-ents hold a rigid position on an issue. There is a mixture of strength and weakness, of self-seeking and high moral purpose, in every politician and in every constituency. Each speaks to each. If a politician caters only to the baser nature of the electorate, to their ignorance and prejudice, that is what he will cultivate. The reverse is also the case. Politicians who speak to the best in their constituencies will draw it out. A public that asks for and rewards high service will attract and keep it. This is a simple equation that I offer, but a vital one.

In my final campaign, in 1980, I took strength from Rosa Parks, whose refusal to give up her seat to a white man led to the boycott of Birmingham, Alabama's bus system 30 years ago. She had to walk some distance to and from work each day. She was asked how she found the strength and she replied, "My feet are tired, but my soul is at rest."

Paris Herald? There are as many descriptions as there are people who have worked on the paper and written about it. To me it was a sear in the theater and a place on the stage.

Certainly, I was there at a time of high drama. I came in 1938, to see Europe. In Paris in May I looked up Arnold Sevareid, whom I knew from campus newspaper days at the University of Minnesota (Arnold was to become better known as Eric.) He told me that there was an opening at the Paris Herald, where he was day city editor. A chat with Eric Hawkins, the managing editor, and I had the job.

The rest of us collected our last pay; the francnotes, as always, nearly pinned together. As we left the darkened city room and walked along the rue de Berri we heard the distant sound of guns to the north. The next day, Evarts and I joined thousands of Parisians fleeing their beloved city. For the time being at least, I'd lost my seat on the stage.

General Rogers, who is 65, will hand over the alliance command to General John R. Galvin at NATO headquarters in Mons on June 26. As commander of the 326,000 U.S. troops in Europe, the top American military man in Europe is also automatically the supreme allied commander in Europe.

The general has been outspoken in recent months about his opposition to the tentative agreement reached by Mr. Shultz and Mr. Gorbachev in Moscow in April. The agreement calls for the removal from Europe of all U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles with ranges between 300 and 3,500 miles (between 486 kilometers and 5,688 kiometers).

General Rogers noted that he had opposed the "zero option" pro-posal in 1981. He argued then that the deployment of Pershing-2 and Tomahawk missiles was needed not just to counter the Soviet deploy-ment of the SS-20 but also to "fill a gap in our spectrum of deterrence, espective of the SS-20."

"The SS-20 coming along in the same time frame just made it more urgent that we reach that decision." he said.

The NATO commander suggested that the alliance members' lack candor then with their own electorates had created the painful political dilemma that can only be resolved now by going ahead with a militarily damaging withdrawal of the Pershing-2. The missile, he noted, can hit any target within its range in 13 minutes and has the highest chance of any U.S. missile penetrating Soviet defenses. o dent that Washington will not back down on its pledge to keep the Pershing-IAs out of the agreement, But he insisted that "the alliance has to say 'Enough is enough' and recognize the fact that nuclear weapons are necessary into the foresceable future."

On other points, General Rogers emphasized his view that NATO must take urgent steps to make up for the loss of the medium-range rockets it is negotiating away by pushing ahead with a new tactical, short-range missile to replace the ar bombs to penetrate Soviet ar defenses.

The general also described a quiet but steady process in which France has improved its minimity coordination with NATO over the past eight years despite its conti ing refusal to be part of the alliance's integrated military command. The general said he now feels confident that, although France continues to insist on making its own decisions if war breaks

Staying in Old Istanbul Tourism is once again big business in Turkey, and Is-tanbul is furiously building high-rise hotels to meet the de-mand. But visitors who don't want the sameness of modern hotels still have two lovely alternatives. One is the Pera Palas Oteli, built in 1892 to provide luxury accom-modations for passengers on the Orient Express. The hotel is an architectural gem of the 19th century, imported from France right down to the details. Its great strength, possibly its great weakness, is that it has changed only marginally over the years. Most of the rooms are in their original state, and some visitors might find this a mixed hlessing. For example, the telephones are of 1920s vintage; there is no dial and calls must be placed through the ho-tel operator. Despite its dowager status, the Pera Palas has tel operator. Despite its dowager status, the Pera Palas has very up-to-date rates: $85 for a single, $107 for a dou-ble, including breakfast. For those seeking 19th-century style with modern comfort, an alternative is the Yesil Ev, formerly the Konak, which is near the Blue Mosque and the Haeia Sorbia Veril En thick mean too And the Hagia Sophia. Yesil Ev, which means "Green House," is one of the pioneering projects of the Turkish Touring & Automobile Association, which is renovating historic buildings. With just 20 rooms, the hotel is comfortably small, with parquet floors, brass beds, handmade carpets and modern telephones. Prices are reasonable by modern standards, at $73 for a single, $97 for a double. USTRALIA has an image problem. Those who do oot know the country persist in seeing it as a vast ranch crawling with sheep and cattle and peopled with sturdy outdoor types given to early morning dips in the billabong and evening barbecues where they sink the Amber Nectar (Paul Hogan's came for Foster's lager) as the sun retreats for its nightly rest. Such visions have been fueled by films, culminat-ing in "Crocodile Dundee," which crowned Paul Hogan as the world's favorite Aussie simply because, in the film, he lived up to most people's idea of the average bloke from Down Under, an innocent from the Outback.

The Outback Innocent does exist, but he is about as rare as the garbage collector who inherits a stately home. Nonetheless the stereotype seems to suit both parties. The Old World and the nearly new world of North America are cootent to think of Australians as men of steel, robust rather than genteel, crude rather than refined. And the Austra-lian hardly winces at being portrayed as the lovable oaf particularly when he is seen shinning up a New York lamp post and conquering the Old World and its moocyed beauties with a wink and a "G'day, mate.

The reality is that most Australians have over seen the Outback, let alone a billabong. The population of 15 million has chosen suburban living and settled the edges of this vast island, some 80 percent living within 50 miles of the sea; a ribbon within a huge island shaped like a ragged square. Anstra-lians may talk about the Outback, the mucb-romanicized, ehallenging, unconquerable Outback, but they don't want to live there. And for the most part they are not much interested in making a visit, although this situation has improved marginally since Paul Hogan made a series of television commercials urging his countrymen to take a look at their own country instead of hopping on the plane to Bali. Hogan's chiding plus early retirement has seen a trickle of camper-vans trundling around the edge and timidly attempting a few days in the Australians are a little afraid of the Outback. Their minds are conditioned from schooldays with Their minds are conditioned from schooldays with tales of tragedy surrounding the early explorers who, while searching for an inland sea, a river system or a route from south to north, met with death from an Aborigine's spear, or scurvy, or lack of water, or who simply vanished. And if they did return, they brought with them blindness and blackened skins. Not the best of images to feed to impressionable minds, especially when accompa-nied by the thought that the desert and the Outback did our always bring out the best in man. did oot always bring out the best in man.

Anyone bearing the story of William John Wills and Robert O'Hara Burke and their struggles to make the first south-north crosssing, or reading Alan Moorehead's account of that journey in "Cooper's Creek," will be struck not so much with visions of courage and nobility as by the competiove spirit with other expeditions and the rows and rivalry within their own team. The Outback thus becomes a sinister and destructive place, where even the fight for survival does not make men pull together. Such harsh cooditions hardly touch today's traveler, yet people still fear they might have a breakdown and not see another vehicle for days. The foreigner, without this background, has fewer problems. When I arrived in Australia to spend nine months researching a book. I could hardly wait to experience the emptiness and isolation of the Outhack. I had to wait though. I had decided to make a systematic journey around Australia in a elockwise direction from Sydney to Sydney, and therefore that city, Canberra and Melbourne, as well as Tasmania, had to be visited first. The wait was made bearable by a stroke of luck on which writers thrive.

During my first weeks in Sydney 1 watched a considerable amount of television - it is as good a way as any to absorb a new country. Night after night I saw an intriguing commercial for Ampol, the Australian oil company, in which Jack Parnell flew around the Outback in a Cessna selling gasoline. But be also became involved in his customers' lives and problems; indeed he was offering an oldfashiooed thing called service. One morning, on impulse, 1 phoned the company and asked if 1 might accompany him. They said yes, and thus several months later began some of the most exciting weeks of my loog visit.

Jack Parnell arranged to meet me in his plane just south of Alice Springs, and arranged for me to be driven up the Stuart Highway from Adelaide to our rendezvous in a road train, a huge articulated truck, delivering gasoline to several road houses, stopping overnight at Coober Pedy, famous for its opal mines and for the fact that before the advent of air conditioning the heat drove men to live underground, and Marla Bore, famous for nothing at the moment but with ambitions to become a thriving Outback township.

On the way I met characters, not Hogan lookalikes, nor innocent, but certainly untamed. There was Chris at the Willoughby roadhouse, a wild young man keen to show me the bullet holes in his ceiling and recall the night he drank rum with a friend until he felt the urge to shoot at the ceiling where he had placed a sticker bearing the picture of a small plane.

The journey took several days and at first Ike, the driver, was hemused by my wish to travel in the cab of a road train staring at "mobs of nothing." It was a stony, colorless, treeless landscape with a few alkies of the store of the s saltbushes, stunied and twisted. I loved every mile of it. The land looked old, weary and dejected: I found it awe-inspiring, particularly in the early morning before the sun bas the power to offend with its heat, and in the evening when white with exhaustion it sinks, ringing the land with a hand of brilliant red.

At Marla Bore 1 met Jack, and for the next week we flew thousands of miles around the central desert arranging business with Aboriginal commu-nities. This was a double bonus: Not only did i see areas beyond the reach of most travelers, but 1 could also glimpse Aboriginal life. This is not easy. Continued on page 8

THE FREQUENT TRAVELER Aer Lingus: An Airline in Search of a Hub

by Roger Collis

THINK it was Camus who said that all freedom is a threat to someone. At any rate, it's one of those now you see it, now you don't maxims that politicians and Eurocrats pushing for deregulation of air transport in the European Com-munity, might well take to heart. The EC Commission's drive for more competition and lower fares through the dismantling of airline cartels for price fixing and route shar-ing is of course a Good Thing. Events are moving fast in Brussels. We now see the prospect of deregulation in Europe, at least hy 1992, when the EC is supposed to become one market without frontiers. Hurrah!

The danger is that under the present state of play, the major carriers might become an oligopoly, forcing the medium-size and small airlines to merge or go out of business, which will lead to less choice for the passenger. We have seen what has happened in the United States, where the top 10 carriers control about 94 percent of the market. You can't get a direct flight to where you want to go, you have to suffer the torture of the major hubs. As the Irishman said, "You can't get there from here." What the business traveler wants is freedom to choose a convenient airport as well as airline.

In Europe, I could see a similar situation developing," says David Kyd, a spokesman for the International Air Transport Association in Geneva. "Who are the British Airways, the Lufthansas and the Air Frances going to stomp on now they have the strength and freedom to do so? They're going to go after the jugulars of the Swissairs, the KLMs, let alone the TAPs and the Aer Linguses of this world simply hecause their natural market base is so enormous and they can funnel traffic into their major hubs with the greater frequencies they can offer. If you're going to have a free-for-all, you've got to allow the smaller airlines to have fifth freedom [whereby traffic is carried between two countries by the airline of a third]. Of course, the major carriers would hate to see Aer Lingus, for example, picking up traffic in Frankfurt and taking it to Rome before going back to Dublin."

Says Cathal Mullan, assistant chief executive, commercial, of Aer Lingus in Duhlin, We have two major problems with deregulation. First is that we ought to have route access within Europe through fifth freedom rights. This is being resisted tooth and nail the carriers in the center, who hecause they control the major hubs, have all the rights they want, BA, Air France and Lufthansa. But the peripheral carriers, ourselves. TAP and SAS to some extent, are at a disadvantage, in the same way as anyone who doesn't control a major hub in the U.S.

"The second thing is the attitude of the Commission. We're against pooling and capacity sharing, but what they are saying is that any agreement hetween airlines is inherently wrong. But for us to serve any off-line point other than the ones we have route access to, we have to have agreements. ... Cooperative agreements can be pro-competitive, provided you're not creating a monopoly in the market."

Some airlines are hoping to come in from the cold through formal mergers or acquisitions. (SAS expects to agree to a merger with Sahena in the next months, according to Sven Heiding of SAS in Stockholm.) Alitalia and British Caledonian are reported to be looking for partners. "Logical partners for us are airlines like Alitalia and Olympic," says Nicolas Canto, senior vice president, sales, at Iberia in Madrid.

"My private understanding is that the antitrust lawyers in Brussels have reassured companies that they will take a permissive attitude to mergers as otherwise this would fly in the face of all the other things they are doing [at the EC]," Kyd says.

According to Mullan, Aer Lingus has three options. "First is a cooperative arrangement with peripheral carriers say Olympic, KLM, TAP and Austrian, whereby we'd keep our key routes, such as Dublin-London, Paris. Brussels, Amsterdam, and agree to feed all traffic on our thin routes through two hubs, say Amsterdam and Vienna. Instead of trying to fly everywhere, the other airlines would do the same. "Second would be a more conventional feed or joint venture arrangement with a

British carrier, such as British Midland or Danair. The concept would be that we'd keep our key routes from Dublin to four or five cities and double up our thin routes with a partner. For instance, Danair out of London has two or three services a week to quite a few European points. If we were to go in behind them, they might be able to build up their frequency to a decent level and at the same time could feed in quite a bit of traffic.

"And third would he to move into the Spanish charter husiness because that's a huge market. We agreed a deal in principle to huy up to 50 percent of the Spanish charter company, Hispania, with the idea of flying out of Spain to all Europe. The deal has run into orobtems because of sharebolding issues. But we are also looking at scheduled carriers in Europe.

"Of course, we could become just a feeder airline serving the London hub with a damned efficient 20 flights a day hut there'd be a very definite economic penalty for Ireland so we don't want to go for that option unless we absolutely have to."

Meanwhile. Aer Lingus is fighting to maintain its dominance on Dublin-London in the face of competition from Ryanair, in the market since May 1986. It will soon be joined by another small airline, Virgin Atlantic, Mullan claims to be holding a share of husiness traffic with innovative fares and sophisticated "vield management." which enables it to hold seats until boarding time.

But Mullan admits that in the long term the only way to stay competitive is to cut costs. "Competition for us is the large carri-ers which have tremendous economies of scale and low-cost airlines paying low wages and exploiting a market niche.

There may be lessons to learn from the small fry. Says Mullan, "There's a small airline called Malinair operating eight or nine flights a day between Donegal and Glasgow, I said to my economic planning people, 'Look, I have a great respect for the way you do your sums, hut would you ever go and look at those people and see how they're doing it, because the laws of economics say they have to be losing money."

House of Blixen, and Streep

by David Leitch

UNGSTED, Denmark - Before she died in 1962 Baroness Karen Blixen, then better known as the author Isak Dinesen, had made arrangements to be buried in secular ground on her small estate, Rungstedlund, north of Copenhagen.

In the years that followed, a trickle of iterary pilgrims made their way to this mildin accessible place, even though the Blixen esidence, a substantial timbered building, remained closed to the public.

Nowadays the trickle has become ream. This became apparent when I asked for directions at the local inn, the Rungsted Kro, a few hundred meters north along the coast road, which leads to the Hamlet castle of Elsinore. The waitress looked up from her trays of open sandwiches and pickled fish. "Ah," she said. "You want to see the Meryl Streep house. Naturally, it is the film "Out of Africa"

Bernston St. A. St.

that bas put Rungsted on the international

map. Everyone in the inn had seen it and held critical views of Streep's Danish accent (not, apparently, at all similar to the baroness's busky and eccentric tones).

They were eager to point the way over the fields and advise that the housekeeper, Mrs. Carlsen, had been known to speak to visitors. But not very often. Up a narrow road, there is a small parking place, indicated by a fence, and signs announcing that the estate of 40 or so acres is now a bird sanctuary. There are also warnings about not picking flowers or being ac-companied by unleashed dogs.

Across some fences and past more signs saying "private," a white-haired woman was at work with great energy at a kitchen garden beside a small orchard. She was not about to be disturbed by any decorous Englisb "excuse me's" across well-kept lawns, and so I set out to find the unhappy anthor's last resting place.

The grave is not posted, so, as if trying to pass some test, you weave between the over-grown woods where once the baroness exercised Pasop, her German shepherd, and searched for four-leaf clovers, which she was supposed to have a supernatural gift for discerning.

On the way yon pass a number of benches marked with people's names in what looks like amateurish blue paintwork — "Madame Carlsen's Bench," the first said. Besides each one there is a garbage can and plastic container.

Somehow I went too far and ended up in a meadow so thick with dandelions they might have been a successful crop. On the far side there seemed to be some joggers. From there I was misdirected by a man exercising a pair of matched Pomeranians, impeccably leashed, and then redirected by an American couple. "There's not a lot to see," they said, "except for an atmosphere." And this there is. Under a beech tree you find a large rectangular slab and around that an area of tiles fenced off with garden twine on sticks.

To one side on a hillock there is another stone slab, vertical this time, inscribed with the name of Jonathon Ewald, Denmark's leading lyric poet of the 18th century, and a character in the Dinesen story, "Converse at Night in Copenhagen." Beside it there is yet another blue bench decorated with graffiti of hearts and initials, not, one guessed, of literary significance.

It turns out that Karen Blixen placed the stone there as a tribute to the poet, who had resided briefly at Rungsted. In those days it had been an inn, or Kra, like its modern cess when it appeared in the United States and England in 1934. The Danish edition, a year later, was received more equivocally, For example, a local critic. Fredrick Schy. berg, called it "a brilliant piece of pastiche by a talented hut wildly affected authoress."

This might not seem the most hostile comment ever made, but 13 years later when she met the Danish poet Thorkild Bjornvig, he recalled in his book "The Pact" that she was still carrying a copy of the infamous review and using it as an example of her fellow-countrymen's hostility and philistinism.

There is no doubt that her high gothic style and affections were alien to the Danish taste for simplicity, and she found the Kiknyu and Masai easier going than the run of her fellow countrymen. And then there was the matter of her masks and multiple identities. Now that she has become Meryl Streep for most people, the situation is yet more confused

But the works (quite apart from the film) and Rungstedlund remain. And it is probable that the trust that administers her estate has received a massive increase in revenue since the film's success. Her already celebrated affair with the English aristocrat and hunter Denys Finch Hatton, probably better known as Robert Redford, has acquired worldwide renown

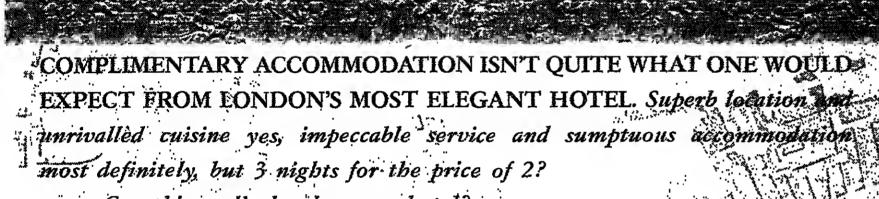

They may yet decide to open the house, where she lived for the last 30 years of her life, after the return from Africa, and wrote her best work.

She became mistress of Rungstedlund in 1939, on the death of her mother, Ingeborg Dinesen, and though this was the house in which she was born all accounts suggest that she never lost her nostalgia for Africa.

The continent had not been kind to her, far harsher in fact than any Danish critic, for as is well-known it was in Kenya that she contracted syphilis from her husband, watched their coffee farm go bankrupt, and saw her love for Finch Hatton end in disaster, apparently some time before he was killed in a plane crash.

The men in her life were not good to her. Her father, Captain Wilhelm Dinesen, committed suicide in a Copenhagen boarding house when she was 14, after an unsuccessful though varied career. Rungstedlund, however, had been one of his more astute acts. Because of advance knowledge about the location of the coastal railway line (along what is now called the Danish Riviera) he had purchased the property very cheaply in the 1870s.

Karen Blixen lived in the east wing in the summer; in winter she shifted into the west

For this most pseudonymous of writers, who at different times published under the names Isak Dinesen, Peter Lawless, Osceola, Nozdref's Cook, Tania Blixen and Pierre Andrejei, always insisted on being called "The Baroness" in conversation as well as correspon-

She acquired the title by her marriage to the Swedish aristocrat Bror Blixen-Finecke, and the fuss made about it thereafter is one explanation of her uneasy reputation at nome - while abroad she was feted from the tart.

Her first publication, "Seven Gothic Tales," had a huge Book of the Month suc-

But it is still a beautiful place and you can easily see the courtyard where, so the biographers say, she paused every night before going to bed so she could look south toward Africa. Perhaps the Danish Academy, which holds its meetings in the historic house, will think of letting the public in, too.

No one is allowed onto a settlement without permission, which is difficult to get. Not suprisingly, Aborigines are fed up with questions from social workers, government offi-cials, anthropologists and the like and they can do without another journalist.

But with Jack I was acceptable. I could learn something of the problems of poor diet, poor health, poor housing, poor educa-tion. Poor everything. It would have been dispiriting had I not been aware of the efforts to improve the situation, not least by Jack

I learned, above all, to appreciate the space and the emptiness that is the essence of the Outback. But one thing remained un-solved. Although I had traveled to distant parts, I had not felt remote or cut off. The mere fact that I had reached a place meant that it was accessible - and, anyway, how can one feel cut off with a plane outside the front door ready to return to the city at a moment's notice? It was several months later that I finally found what I had been seeking. I was on a cattle station in the Northern Territory. There was no plane and the nearest settlement was an hour away by boat. The news crackled over the radio at 6 A.M. and was gone. What did it matter; the rest of the world had lost all significance.

This is the Australia that the traveler should not miss. It is becoming easier to have an adventurous itinerary. It may not be possible to travel the Stuart Highway by road train, but it is perfectly possible by long-distance hus, stopping at the same roadhouses

It is also possible to take a desert safari. These are usually graded into three levels; easy-going, on good tracks (in four-wheeldrive vchicles); some rugged traveling; and plenty of rugged traveling.

My suggested itinerary for first-timers is to head straight for the Barrier Reef islands off the coast of Queensland. The islands are a perfect place recover from a long flight and to adjust to the climate. Qantas flies direct to Cairns and Townsville. From Townsville several islands are within easy reach by light plane. Hirochinbrook and Orpheus islands span the price range from simple and comfortable to deluxe.

From Cairns there is Lizard Island. It is exclusive and expensive (around $160 a day). but includes all meals and access to all water sports. I spent the days on Lizard learning to snorkel and scuba dive under the guidance of an instructor who managed to quell my fear of deep water and enable me to see the ref the way it ought to be seen - close enough to touch.

After such a relaxing start I would head for Alice Springs by road, to get a feel for the distances and emptiness. This takes about three days, stopping overnight in motels in Mount Isa, an isolated mining town, and Tennant Creek, where the east-west road meets the north-south route from Darwin.

Alice Springs is thriving, modern and growing, with a wide range of hotels and enough places of interest to fill two or three days. It is worth noting that Ayers Rock is not on Alice's doorstep - it is 200 miles away. You can fly. An overnight stop is necessary in order to see the Rock either at sunrise or sunset, or both.

From Alice there is a choice; for the truly adventurous I would suggest a six-night safa-ri to Perth. Those who feel they have seen enough of the desert can hop on the Ghan Railway at Alice and head for Adelaide perhaps timing their arrival to coincide with the biennial Festival of the Arts (March 1988). Time permitting, then head for Syd-ney (again by train), which next year will be the focal point of the celebrations to commemorate the 200th anniversary of European settlement

TRAVEL

The Timelessness Of Northern Greece

by Suzanne Lowry

HALKIDIKI is the strangely-shaped penin-sula that reaches out of the northern Greek province of Macedonia into the Aegean like an ancient, upturned hand. So striking is the hand-like topography that the three prongs that form the southern part of Chalkidiki are popularly known as fingers.

For this straggling outcrop of the kingdom of Alexander the Great, a comhination of geography and history over the centuries before and since has insured a remoteness less easily penetrable to the ordinary traveler than elsewhere on the Greek mainland. From earliest times Chalkidiki has suffered invasion, occupation and depredation. with the attendant destruction of settlements, people and communications.

The place has been ruled and misruled in turn by the Romans, Huns, Turks, Venetians, Turks again and, briefly, the Germans. The Turkisb were by far the longest recent overlords, finally evicted in 1912. So, while the region is littered with the assorted remnants of all these cultures ancient and modern, the currently occupied villages and towns date mostly from the 20th

As in other parts of the world that have suffered such perennial upheaval, time here has a kind of irrelevance; what changes will change again, maybe tomorrow, maybe not. It is perhaps only now, with the latest invasion by tourists, that the difference between a decade and a millennium is clearly measured, and a sense of haphazard urgency has set in.

It is said that the very first inhabitants of Greece lived in Chalkidiki, in and around the caves of Petralona, 60 kilometers south of Thessaloniki, the capital of northern Greece, Traces of controlled fire dating back 700,000 years have been found and, even more dramatic, the skull of a woman a quarter of a million years old. It was embedded in one of the stalagmites that give the caves their spectacu-

Not a lot has changed, except the addition of an excellent highway — one of the best in all of Greece, it is - which loops its way around the peninsula, and facilitates the newest and most lucrative of industries, tourism.

WALL STREET WATCH

G&W's Films, Books Win Analysts' Rave Reviews

By PHILLIP R. WIGGINS New York Times Service

EW YORK — In Hollywood, where fortunes are won and lost on innovative movie productions, Gulf & Western Inc. — through its Paramount Pictures subsidiary — has come up with two more box office hits in "Beverly Hills Cop II" and "The Untouchables." These hits, combined with the strong results of its publishing and financial services operations, have recently prompted many analysts to raise their earnings estimates and stock target prices for the company

On Tuesday G&W's stock jumped $2.75 a share on the New York Stock Exchange, to a record $90. By Thursday's close, it had slipped back to $88.50. Wall Street attributed Tuesday's big jump primarily to an increased earnings estimate by Martin Romm, an analyst at First Boston Corp. He pre-dicted that G&W would earn $5.95, not $5.40, in the fiscal year that ends Oct. 31. For fiscal 1988, he raised his estimate to $6.25 a share from $6.

"Not only will their strong film production results increase third-quarter operating profits, but fiscal 1988 should also be strong when these films are released in foreign theatrical, home video and pay cable TV," Mr. Romm said Wednesday. "Simon & Schuster and the Associates financial services units should also increase their earnings as the company begins to benefit from a better balancing of its business."

Indeed, although the immediate focus has been on G&W's film successes, analysis say the company is also feeling the positive effects of its restructuring from a broad-based conglomerate into three core businesses

In August 1983, G&W sold some of its manufacturing and zinc operations as well as its race tracks. Then, in January 1985, it sold its sugar-growing operations in the Dominican Republic and Florida

Later that year, it sold its consumer and industrial products group, which included G&W Manufacturing Co. and operations in apparel and hosiery, bedding and home furnishings, and automotive after-market parts distribution.

* &W HAS ALSO BEEN BUSY making acquisitions. It has invested more than $1.4 billion since the beginning of fiscal 1984, primarily in publishing. In fiscal 1986, G&W derived about half its earnings from financial services, about one-quarter from publishing and infor-mation services (Simon & Schuster, including Prentice-Hall and Pocket Books), and most of the rest from entertainment (Paramount Pictures, Famous Players Ltd. in Canada, Mann Theaters and Madison Square Garden Corp.).

Marc H. Gerstein, an analyst at Value Line Investment Survey, said that because of G&W's tight policy of matching interest rates on new loans to the current cost of funds, the company had done well in financial services whether rates rose or fell.

Mark Manson, an analyst at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette said that G&W's product emphasis was likely to shift in the future. "Over time, I expect the publishing division to play a more important role," he said. "They have been spending heavily on product development in this area and it should be positioned well even if Paramount cools down."

He estimated that earnings would be around $5.80 a share for the current year, and at least $6:30 a share for fiscal 1988. "G&W's stock should rise to about $100 a share within the next six months," he said.

"Beverly Hills Cop II" opened May 20 and in its first 28 days grossed $99.8 million, including more than $26.3 million over the Memorial Day holiday weekend, the biggest three-day weekend moneymaker in history. In its first 14 days, "The Untouchables" grossed $27 million. It is being shown in many fewer theaters than "Cop II."

Gillette Rebuffs Revlon $4.7 Billion Bid

Is Turned Down

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches BOSTON - Gillette Co. rejected Thursday a $4.66 billion take over offer from Revion Group Inc., seven months after Gillette fended off another unsolicited bid from the big cosmetics company. Under the terms of a "standstill agreement" the companies reached after the initial takeover hattle, Revion had to seek the consent of Gillette's board before launching a Western's earnings are up since new buyout bid. Gillette's board met Thursday and later announced the rejection. Gillette, the Boston-based maker of razor blades and other consumer products, said Revion proposed Wednesday to pay at least $40.50 in cash for each of Gillette's 115 mil-lion common shares outstanding. Gillette's common stock closed at $39.375 a share, up $2.375, on the New York Stock Exchange. Nearly 9 millioo Gillette shares changed hands, making the stock the most active issue. Revlon's stock rose 25 cents a share, to $20.

Last November, Gillette thwart-ed Revion's $4.12 billion takeover effort by repurchasing Revion's 14 percent stake in Gillette at an ahove-market price, providing Revion with a profit of $34 million on its investment. Gillette bought back an additional 10 percent of its shares from other stockholders, and launched a restructuring plan.

The standstill agreement also states that if Gillette accepts a buyout before Nov. 24 for more than $29.75 a share, Gillette would have to pay Revion the difference between the huyout price and $29.75 for each of the 9.23 millioo Gillette shares that Gillette repurchased from Revion last year. The agreement prompted one analyst to suggest that Revion's chairman, Ronald O. Perelman, is seeking to trigger a competing bid. "I think Perelman is trying to put this company into play because he stands to make a fortune from it," said Andrew Shore of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. (Reuters, AP)

United's Friendly Skies Turn Cloudy

Allegis Fight Will Leave Airline Separate but Weaker

By Agis Salpukas New York Times Service NEW YORK - United Airlines will almost certainly emerge from the takeover battle for Allegis Corp. as an independent company. The odds are just as great that the airline will emerge much weakened. United is struggling under a cloud of uncertainty - and will continue to for some time. If Allegis shareholders approve their board's latest restructuring proposals, it will take time for the company to sell its Hertz car rental operations and Westin and Hilton International hotels.

When United is finally on its own, its debt load will probably be twice as high - an onerous $4 billion - as it is now. With employees likely to own a substan-tial share of United, the new management that the board plans to install will have to give union leaders and employees a greater role in decision-making.

The problems are not all internal. United's competitors, which have been closely following the struggles at Allegis, have no in-tention of giving United any respite.

"Obviously we're interested observers of all that's been going on," said Donald J. Carty, senior vice president for airline planning at American Airlines.

Putting it more bluntly, a senior executive at another major airline said United's competitors "are licking their chops." At a different competitor, one official said, "Every competing airline is certainly lonking at what's happening at United and what effects there might be." American Airlines, which is failed.

town. "Are we going to invest more resources in Chicago as a result of what Allegis is going through?" Mr. Carty asked. "The answer is probably yes." Other large competitors, such as Northwest and Texas Air, the parent of Continental and Eastern, are monitoring develop-expanding its operadons in Den-ver — it bought Denver-based Frontier Airlines late last year ---could further strengthen its position there.

United has huilt a hub in Denver and is No. 1 in that market. But its effort to gain overwhelming dominance there foundered when its attempt to buy Frontier

Northwest, the largest United States carrier to the Far East, could consolidate its position further if United is forced to cut back its expansion in that area. United became a major competitor there last year, when it bought the Pacific routes of Pan

Sales of State Firms Net France 52 Billion Francs

Reuters

PARIS — The program of selling off state-run companies begun late last year has earned the French state about 52 billion francs (58.5 billion at current rates), the Finance Ministry said Thursday.

Sources close to Finance Minister Edouard Balladur said that the money would be used to help pay off a public debt that stood at 398.2 billion francs at the end of 1986.

On Sunday, Mr. Balladur bad rejected press and opposition charges that share prices for the privatized companies had been set too low and were a "giveaway" to make the government's program look good. Mr. Balladur said that the average premium of shares trading on the Bourse was between 15 and 30 percent over their offer price, and that this compared with premiums of between 60 and 80 percent on similar share flotations in Britain.

The ministry said that the returns included those from Societé Générale, the banking group whose two-week public flotation began Monday. It was the eighth state-owned company put up for sale, of the 66 privatizations planned. The public sale offer for 40 percent of the television channel TF-1 will start June 29, ministry sources said.

WELLINGTON. New Zealand - Twenty-five percent of state-owned Air New Zealand Ltd. will be sold to the public, the minister of civil aviation, Richard W. Preb-ble, announced Thursday.

New Zealand

To Sell 25%

Of Airline

He said the government would appoint an adviser to help it decide how the shares should be sold, the timing and the price.

"We are in no particular rush to sell our shares in Air New Zealand." Mr. Prebble said. "Our aim is to maximize the benefit to the taxpayer. If that means waiting for a while, then so be it."

wealth He said that Air New Zealand expected to release its results soon for the year ending March 31, and that he was confident it would post offshore an excellent profit.

Mr. Prebble said that access 10 new sources of capital would help the airline expand and develop.

Norman Geary, the company's managing director, said the sale would release the airline from burdensome government procedures. He said the company had proposed the sale in 1984.

The announcement on Air New Zealand follows the public sale in March of about 13 percent of Bank of New Zealand Ltd. The government has said it also will float pan of the capital of other state-owned operations, including DFC New Zealand Lid., and Petroleum Corp. of New Zealand Ltd.

THE OECD REPORT: An economic forecast notable for its gloomy tenor ECONOMY: Problems Are Worsening. Agency Says

The report warned that "if business confidence and spending conwhose currencies have been appreciating and if export sales remain weak, this might lead to even more weak, into anight lead to even more subjaced growth in domestic de-mand and imports. In this case the international payments imbalances between the three biggest OECD countries could remain at present levels or even grow."

Despite the substantial devaluation of the dollar over the past two tion of the dottar over the past two years, the OECD projects that the U.S. current account deficit will increase further S7 billion this year, to $147 billion. Next year, this would shrink by almost $20 billion, it projects. But, the OECD said, the deficit

"Until the pattern of growth rates of domestic demand in the United States and the rest of the OECD becomes more conducive to adjustment," the report said, "the U.S. external deficit may remain large and tend to feed on itself through the interaction with the growing stock of net external liabilitics" --- the ever-widening amount interest paid on the growing vol-ume of U.S. assets held by foreigners.

In a nutshell, the OECD said that the imbalances "will not go away easily and, on present conditions and policies, might even wid-en." The problem is that "such im-

The "overriding priority" for the United States is to substantially reduce its hudget deficit, possibly by raising taxes, the OECD said. "Failure to reach a satisfactory agreement" on

It predicted that the U.S. economic growth rate would edge up to 2.75 percent next year from 2.5 percent this year and last, but forecast that domes-tic demand would grow relatively slowly.

But inflation appears to be heading higher, part-ly because of the lower dollar. The OECD predicted that inflation would rise 4 percent this year and 4.5 percent next, after 2.1 percent in 1986.

The substantial depreciation of the dollar over the past two years is having the intended effect on the U.S. trade position, but not enough, the report said.

"In contrast to the last two years, net exports should exert a positive influence on GNP growth, adding perhaps 0.75 percent in both 1987 and 1988," it said.

According to the OECD, growth in inflation-adjusted gross national product will slump this year to an annual rate of 1.5 percent — the lowest against the dollar over the past two years and to The powerful West German economy - which the United States wants to act as the "locomotive" the resulting loss of exports. But the OECD warned that the key to an improvement in the economy was higher domestic demand, which is forecast to rise only by 2.5 percent this year and 2.75 percent in 1988, well below the 1986 rate of 3.7 percent.

While the OECD praises the government's plan to bring forward to next January 5 billion DM (about $2.7 billion) in tax cuts, it is not as optimistic as Bonn that it will be enough.

"Officials in both Germany and Japan take a more buoyant view on the prospects" for such measures, said David Henderson, chief OECD economist. "These differences are well within the margin of error" to be found in any forecast.

Japan: Spending Package Clouds Picture

International Herald Tribune

Of all the country analyses contained in the OECD semiannual Economic Outlonk, the commentary on Japan is the most tentative because of the uncertain impact of the government's planned supplemental budget package of 6 trillion yen, or about $40 billion.

Not enough details have yet emerged for economists to begin running the numbers through their computers. In addition, given past Japanese prom-ises that were only partly fulfilled, there is considerable skepucism about the implementation.

Nevertheless, the OECD's chief economist, David Henderson, told reporters that the additional planned spending and tax cuts could add 1 percentage point to the nation's economic growth rate as well as "some stimulation to imports." Not including that projected stimulus, the secretariat is projecting a 2 percent rate of economic growth this year and next with domestic demand running at about 2.5 percent and inflation rising to 1.75 percent in 1988 from zero this year.

Japan's trade surplus is expected to increase this year to $105.5 billion from $92.7 billion last year. Next year, the surplus is projected at just over $100 hillion.

However, the wider current account surplus will not rise as much as the trade surplus, it said. The OECD is projecting a $9 billion increase, to $95 billion.

workers should get reasonable pay raises. Last year, Italy ranked as one of the fastest growing economies with gross domestic product rising 2.7 percent. Italy's GDP may grow by 3 percent in 1987, but will then fall back to 2.5 percent in 1988. While such growth could boost employment by 0.25 to 0.5 percent, an even faster rise in the size of the work force of

An 11.75 percent jobless rate is forecast by the second half of 1988, up from an expected 11.5 percent rate for the second half of 1987 and 11 percent in the second half of 1986.

In 1987, the consumer price rise could slow to 4.75 percent on an annual basis from 6.1 percent in 1986, but inflation will probably stabilize around 5 percent. Wage increases this year and next should boost consumer spending but are expected to slacken in 1988.

Britain: Faster Inflation Renters

هجذا من المجل

Britons should expect an increase in inflation in the next 18 Slower economic growth, as higher prices affect consumer spending, and a widening trade gap are also forecast along with a drop in unemployment rales.

Unemployment is expected to be at 11 percent in the second half of 1987, down from 11.7 percent in the like period in 1986, and at 10.75 to 10.6 percent - for the first time in four years. Page 11.)

Consumer prices are expected to rise at a 4.25 percent annual rate in the second part of this year and at a 4.5 percent rate in 1988. Last year's average was 3.7 percent.

The rise in pay is likely to harm Britain's competitive position after a marked improvement in 1986.

Export growth is projected to slow and the trade balance to deteriorate sharply to a S6 billion deficit in 1988 from a forecast deficit of $2.5 billion deficit this year.

France: Revived Growth

Economic growth is expected to revive later this year in France, but unemployment will worsen.

growth rate during the next six months of France's gross domestic product, the total value of goods and services excluding foreign investment income, was estimated at about 2 percent. That would be in line with 1986 trends but much better than the 0.5 percent rate in the first half of this year.

The economic situation has deteriorated somewhat during the early months of 1987: Activity has slowed, primarily reflecting an inventory adjustment, while unemployment has risen rapidly and inflation has accelerated," the OECD said.

Unemployment is likely to reach 12 percent of the work force by the end of 1988. The government this month projected 3.4 million unemployed by 1991, up from 2.66 million in April.

Employment in the private sector could increase slightly in 1988, but the rise is likely to fail well short of the growth in the labor supply. Inflation is expected to slow and domestic demand for goods should pick up in the second half of this year.

In addition, another group of Allegis workers, the Coalition Acting for Rights of Employees, an nounced this week that it had drawn up its own plan to acquire United. It said it had the support of more than 3,000 employees in 22 states.

Allegis's board sull hopes to retain control of the airline - even if the unions end up with a substantial stake.

Despite all the obstacles facing United, it would be foolish to write it off as a major force in the airline industry, analysts said,

Indeed, if United can ride out its current travails, it could become a stronger competitor than it is now.

BOOK BRIEFS

ALNILAM, by James Dickey. Doubleday, 245 Park Arenne, New York, N. Y. 10167.

Is it fair to judge James Dickey's new novel by appearances? For instance, by its rather uneuphonious title, "Alnilam," which, as as tronomers will immediately recognize, refers to the star at the center of the belt of Orion, and means "string of pearls" in Arabic? Or by the length and format of the book — nearly 700 pages, many of them divided into double columns, the ones on the left in boldface, the ones on the right in lighter type? Or by its having taken Dickey 36 years to write it, with time off for a dozen or so other books, among them poetry, criticism and his powerful first novel, "Deliverance"?

Is it unfair to approach such a work with trepidation, suspicious that the author may have overindulged himself and allowed his ambitious undertaking to bloat? The answer, wonderful things in "Alnilam." There are also things about it that justify one's initial suspicions that Dickey has failed to write a novel as taut and exciting as "Deliverance" was. The story of "Alnilam," for all its length, is surprisingly simple and absorbing, at least on the surface. In the year 1943, Frank Cahill, a the surface. In the year 1945, Frank Canill, a 54-year-old carpenter from Atlanta who has recently gone blind from "early-onset diabe-tes," receives a telegram informing him that his son, Joel Wesley Cahill, has been killed in a flight-training accident. Though Cahill has never met his son, his wife having left him before Joel's birth, he decides to cooperate with the telegram's request to "please contact" the training field's commanding officer in Peckover, North Carolina. With his seeing eve dog, Zack, he takes a bus to Peckover, meets the colonel in command, and begins to investigate his son's death.

For readers captivated by Dickey's vision, there is an intricate network of symbols to explore: fire, air, water, the Phoenix, the maze, the snake, the constellation of Orion, Sirius the Dog Star and on and on, down a slope as dizzying as a fall from the sky. But skeptical readers will find such symbols labored. For them, "Alnilam" may never get off the ground. (Christopher Lehmann-Haupt, NYT)

On "Wheel of Fortune," which commands and audience of 43 million daily, her success i audience of 43 million daily, her success is predicated on her complete ingenuousness, here all-American cheerleading overcoming all ob-stacles: Vanna White really means it. But they hostess remains an enigma to millions, which is the reason for this book. White wants to put an end to the tabloid speculation about her private life: her romance with the late John Gibson, a Chippendale's dancer and soap star; and those notorious "lingerie" ads currently on display in Playboy. But the book gets away from her. White does speak up in "Vanna Speaks," but the problem is she never knows quite when to shut up. Much of the book is taken up by her pursuit of the American dream: She went to the Atlanta School of Fashion and Design. where the loveliest model turned out to be a man. Then she moved to Hollywood, where at her nadir she posed for those "lingerie" ads. (There isn't very much lingerie showing.) Then — presto! — "Wheel of Fortune": Merv Grif-fin, the creator, "thought I turned the letters better than anyone else."

U.S. Olympic Officials Shun Idea of Boycott

By Michael Janofsky

New York Times Service NEW YORK --- U.S. Olympic officials expressed concern Wednesday over recent demonstrations in South Korea, where the 1988 Summer Games are to be held. But they said it would be inappropriate to suggest, as had the Reverend Jesse Jackson, that the threat of an U.S. boycott would push South Korea's government toward political reform. George D. Miller, the U.S. Olympic Committee executive director, said U.S. officials were monitoring events in South Korea, where protests against the government of President Chun Doo Hwan had spread this week from Seoal to other cities in the country.

"We're at the watch stage right now," Miller said. "Certainly, anytime there are disruptions in a country, naturally, there are levels of concern. But we're not yet at the hand-wringing stage." International Olympic Committee officials have said they have no alternative plans. Jackson, an undeclared candidate for the Democratic nomination for president, met Monday with the South Korean ambassador in Washington, and said that he had told him that a U.S. boycott of the Games could be used to bring about changes in South Korea. "We're not calling for a boycott," Jackson said Wednesday on the ABC program "Good Morning America." "Yet it is high up on the ladder of considering. Something must be done."

Boycotts have discupted the last three Sommer Olympics. The United States and 65 other nations did not participate in the 1980 in Moscow because of the Soviet presence in Afghanistan. Four years later, the Soviet Union and 13 of its allies did not attend the Los Angeles Games, citing inadequate security, although it was widely believed that the actual reason was retaliation. In 1976, African nations refused to compete in the Montreal Games to protest against the inclusion of New Zealand, whose national rugby team had played against South Africa. Boycotts "don't work, pure and simple," said Anita DeFrantz, a former Olympic rower and currently one of two U.S. members of the IOC. "Why would we use something we know doesn't work? The people of South Korea will have to make decisions for themselves."

If the demonstrations were to continue, she said, "they would become a concern. But we're still 15 months away. That's several eternities, the way the world moves now."

Wales Sneaks Into 3d Place

Australia's Brian Smith was too late Thursday to stop Gareth Roberts from scoring the first try for Wales, which won, 22-21, in New Zealand to take third place in the World Cup of rugby. Australia had to play with 14 men after English referee Fred Howard sent off flanker David Codey five minutes into the contest for an offense in the bottom of a ruck.

Saberhagen, White Help Sad Royals Win

United Press In KANSAS CTTY, Missouri Bret Saberhagen's thoughts kept returning to his first major-league manager throughout the first game the Kansas City Royals played after the death of Dick Howser.

Second baseman Frank White took a different approach, thinking Howser would want his team to concentrate on the game at hand. Saberhagen, the Royals' starting pitcher, and White helped their team end a four-game losing streak Wednesday, hours after Howser's death at age $1. The Royals' former manager died after an 11-month battle against brain cancer. Saberhagen improved his record to 12-1 and White hit a three-run home run to give the Royals a 10-5 vietory over the Oakland Athletics, with George Brett and Bo Jackson contributing bases-empty bomers. Oakland starter Dave Stewart allowed all three home runs.

"He was a great guy to play for," Saberhagen said of Howser. "He was a player's coach. I wasn't necessarily thinking about him while on the mound, more between innings. Before the game 1 was going out there with the idea that we needed this one for him. It didn't turn out the best way, but we got the job done. It was in the back of my mind and it was kind of upsetting." "This was just a game we had to win," White said, "When the game starts you have to forget those things. In the moments you're not busy, then you think about what's going on.'

held Philadelphia to six hits. Padres 8, Dodgers 7: In San Die-go, John Kruk broke an 0-for-17 slump with a two-out, two-run single during a three-run seventh that beat Los Angeles. The Padres won their fifth straight, their longest such streak since 1985, while the Dodgers have lost six of their last seven.

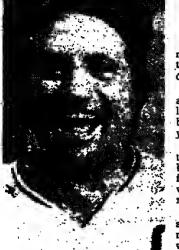

Braves 6, Giants 1: In Atlanta, Rick Mahler and two relievers held San Francisco to three hits and Dale Murphy hit his 20th homer. It was the Giants' fifth straight loss.

The Associated Press AUSTIN. Texas - The University of Texas football program was placed on a two-year probation Wednesday by the NCAA because of rules violations over the past several years. Texas is the third Southwest Conference school to be put on probation, joining Southern Methodist, Texas Tech and Texas Christian. Of the nine SWC schools, only Rice and Arkansas are not either on NCAA probation or under investigation.

Texas' penalties will reduce its number of football scholarships and number of recruiting visits, but not affect bowl and television appearances

The NCAA said a significant number of rules violations were found. But, with one exception, none of the serious violations involved the recruitment of prospective student-athletes."

The NCAA said the serious violation involved the gift of very substanual, improper extra benefits to a very talented enrolled student-athlete."

A Sense of Insecurity

By Russell Baker N EW YORK - I have these feelings. Some are about insurance. I have a feeling that when I need the insurance it will turn out that the policy doesn't cover what I need it for.

I have this feeling that I'd better not try to collect if the car gets smashed up either, because they will cancel my insurance and blackball me throughout the insurance industry and I will never be able to get any insurance again. Not even the kind that doesn't cover anything.

Feelings is all they are. If you braced me and said, "You have no reason for these feelings. You are not thinking things through. You are just a miserable whiner without any spirit. It's people like you, shooting their mouths off without knowing what they're talking about, who spoil life for everybody cise" — if you said that, I would have to say, "You're probably right." Still, the feelings don't go away.

п

I have this feeling that knowing what you're talking about doesn't make any difference when you're talking to (1) adolescents, (2) males between 25 and 51 years of age, (3) lawyers and (4) employees of large corporations whose job is dealing with complaints on the telephone. I have this feeling that it doesn't do much good to go to a psychiatrist if you are sensible enough to know you ought to go to a psychiatrist. I have dozens of medical feelings. For instance, I have this feeling that if I get put in a hospital the worst doctor ever graduated from an offshore medical school will be in charge of my case and take out the wrong organs, administer the wrong drugs, and pronounce me dead by mistake.

I have this feeling that prescripoon drugs are bad for you unless the situation is so bleak that heirs are already fighting about who gets the convertible.

And this feeling that people who take aspirin more than once every two years have weak characters.

Change of subject: Politics — I have this feeling that whoever I am for in a political contest will always

I have this feeling that after paying a fortune to have the deficiency corrected and the equipment put in working order, one of my children or my friend Pomfret will drop in, look at it, grin wisely and say, "So you let them sell you that chunker, did you?"

Technology continued: H-bomb. MIRV, supercontinental ballistic missile with amazing pinpoint ac-curacy, et cetera — I have this feeling that an astonishing volume of these break-the-bank, miracle planet burners will wander off to all the wrong places when their big moment comes, though a lot of them won't go anyplace at all, but just sit in their holes sizzling nastily, including the one in the hole up the street from my house. Politics? I have this feeling that oothing really catastrophic can happen to the country as long as President Reagan remains president. I have this feeling about that: that all the catastrophe that wanted to flatten us during the Reagan years has been restraining itself until he leaves office.

I have this feeling that all that accumulated catastrophe is just dozing, waiting for the next president to take over. Ever read about the 1920s? After Harding and Coolidge came Hoover and catastrophe; I have this feeling that the next president is going to be Hoo-

No, these feelings don't keep me always depressed. Sometimes I have a feeling that turns out to be completely unjustified, and it makes me feel great. "These feelings can always be wrong," I tell myself, "so relax; the oext president may not be Hoover after all." Of course, since he will be chosen

Nyoung French ballet stars, Sylvie Guillem and Patrick Du-pond, brought 4,000 cheering viewers to their feet at last year's gala opening of the Paris Opera Ballet in New York, those in the know credited their triumph to Claude Bessy as well.

Behind the French company, which opened Tuesday night at the Metropolitan Opera House with "Cinderella" — a new version created in Paris earlier this season by its director, Rudoif Nurever - is the school that trains its dancers. And behind the especially outstanding new generation that has graduated from the Paris Opera Ballet School is Bessy, the former ballerina who became a star in the company in the 1950s and who has been the director of the school since 1972. Strongly opinionated and energetic, Bessy has a very clear idea of what constitutes French ballet tradition and where she would like to see its schooling go in the future.

"An open mind" in an institu-tion founded in 1672 — this is what Bessy, who is 54, said she sought to instill in her charges and the school's teachers.

"When I took over the school, the teaching had not evolved for 20 years," she said, speaking in French during a recent interview. "Over two years, I traveled to the United States, Britain, Russia and Denmark to visit schools. Our own model was good at the base but not in its form. There were certain things lacking. We had a closed door. Fve added classes now I myself did not have modern dance, folk dancing, mime and more adagio."

But it is a new open-mindedness among the current dancers that she calls "my success." Nonetheless, there is no doubt in Bessy's own mind that the French training method is best.

Bessy answered with what she called a history lesson. For Bessy this uniform system "The base in France is Italian, needs to be modernized. "It is a system that is dying," she said. In although the ballet vocabulary is the United States, she sees the French. The Italian dancers, in-

But the public liked the Italian brio and this was kept with the purity of clear move-ment. In the 19th century, you had a fantastic teacher like Louis Mérante [often painted by Degas] and later, Gustave Ricaux and Albert Aveline. My three reference points are the ballerina Carlotta Zambelli, Aveline and Serge Lifar." Speaking of Lifar, the Russian-

year. Bessy has made a special effort to revive ballets from the old French repertory. "These old classical ballets should remain part of our collective memory,"

she said. When the school moves next seasoo into a new building in the suburb of Namerre, Bessy hopes to create an all-encompassing cul-tural environment. "Why are there no statues of Nijinsky and Lifar in France? Because there is no contact among the arts anymore. Each is in its compartment "

Bardot Auction Raises $496,000 for Animals

Brigitte Bardot's "most trea sured" personal property fetched 3,021,000 francs (about $496,000) at a crowded auction in Paris, the auctioneer Jacques Tajan said Thursday. When the sale ended Wednesday night, an estimate of 3.5 million francs had been annonneed. Tajan said the discrepan-cy was caused by the difficulty in calculating bids coming from several rooms at a time. The auction rooms were jammed with bidders, reporters, photographers and cam-era erews from 14 countries. The money was raised to establish an animal protection foundation bearing the actress's name. "I gave my beanty and my youth to men," stir Bardot, 52, who retired from the movies in 1973, "and now I'm giving my wisdom and experience, the best of me, to animals." The high-est bid was for an 8.76 carat dia-mond given to Bardot by her third backed of the state of husband, Gunther Sachs, heir to the Opel car fortune, which fetched 1.3 million frames.

Donna Rice admits her involve-ment with Gary Hart set her up for unwanted publicity but told Barba-ra Walters in a TV interview that she was treated unfairly by the news media. "Twe been painted as a person that I'm not," Rice said in excerpts released by ABC. "It isn't fair. And that makes me angry. I think it's unlair. I don't think the media has the right to make a private person a public person." Wal-ters asked Rice who took the pho-tographs, including one of Rice on Hart's lap, during a yacht trip from Mismi to Binini. "Lynn Arasandt." Rice said, referring to a friend who was along ou the yacht trip. "She took them, She encouraged the tak-ing of the photographs, and she suggested the shot to sit on Gary Hart's lap." Waiters asked if they are the photographs she presumes Armandt sold to The National Enquirer. "Presumes?" Rice responded. "That she sold!"

A 8ritisb radio broadcaster in Wolverhampton was suspended from work for two days for saying on the air that Princess Diana was "a bit of a dog" and that the Duchess of York was frumpy and over-weight. The switchboard at Beacoa Radio was flooded with calls after the sports editor Pat Foley made(; the comments.
